Edward II The Unconventional King

Edward II had some rather alarming aspects to his personality. He had the notorious Plantagenet temper coupled with a severe stubborn streak. Add to that his utter infatuation with his 'favourites', notably Piers Gaveston and Hugh Despenser the Younger, and his inability to moderate his own behaviour, thereby creating the very situation he most hopes to avoid, and you have a recipe for a disastrous reign.

Edward II: The Unconventional King by Foreword by Ian ...

Edward II has come down to us as one of the worst English kings of all. With a reign filled by reliance on male favourites, constant threats of civil wars, endless quarrels with his barons, unsuccessful military campaigns (including what was perhaps the worst English military defeat ever to take place on British soil), abdication and - so we are led to believe - a brutal death in captivity ...

Edward II: The Unconventional King by Kathryn Warner ...

In terms of reputation, King Edward II has one of the most infamous in the history of England's monarchy. And we think he deserves it. His scandalously blind devotion to his male favourites not only unseated the balance of the kingdom, it destroyed his reign, his marriage and it led to his deposition and death.
