The Castle is a 1926 novel by Franz Kafka. In it a protagonist known only as "K." arrives in a village and struggles to gain access to the mysterious authorities who govern it from a castle. Kafka died before he could finish the work, but suggested it would end with K. dying in the village, the castle notifying him on his death bed that his "legal claim to live in the village was not valid, yet, taking certain auxiliary circumstances into account, he was permitted to live and work there." Dark a

The Castle by Franz Kafka

Franz Kafka, The Castle. You know a writer has made their mark when their name ends up becoming used as an adjective: Dickensian and Orwellian spring to mind of course, but we also occasionally see Shavian to describe George Bernard Shaw's didactic commitment to social purpose, Wellsian to describe a futurism reminiscent of H G Wells, or Tolkienesque for anything with elves or wizards in it.

Kafka's The Castle is the dramatization of man's self-discovery in the depth of dark, ambiguous and diabolic world. This world which has been pictured by Kafka is the world of the Castle itself. This paper attempts to make a psychological study on Kafka's The Castle. Keywords: Kafka, The Castle, Psychology, Self, Hope, Life, Sin. INTRODUCTION

A Psychological Analysis on Franz Kafka's The Castle

Reading Kafka's "The Castle" is like being trapped inside the head of a mental patient. It's irrational, stifling, claustrophobic, and filled with the sound of an unrelenting inner monologue that is helplessly compelled to analyze even the minutest occurrence for significance.

Franz Kafka's The Castle by David Fishelson

The Castle is a great modernist novel. But this hardcover version appears to be that someone printed the pages in very very small type on a computer and then put on a hardcover on the pages by hand. It is an injustice to Kafka to even put this thing on the market.
