A Grief Observed is a collection of C. S. Lewis 's reflections on the experience of bereavement following the death of his wife, Joy Davidman, in 1960. The book was first published in 1961 under the pseudonym N.W. Clerk, as Lewis wished to avoid identification as the author. Though republished in 1963, after his death, under his own name, the text still refers to his wife as "H" (her first name, which she rarely used, was Helen).

Clerk and attributed to Lewis only after his death. A Grief Observed "is a stark recounting of one man's studied attempts to come to grips with and in the end defeat the emotional paralysis of the most shattering grief of his life" (XV). Comprised of four chapters, the book chronicles Lewis's progression through various stages of grief as he struggles to come to terms with the death of his wife.

When A Grief Observed was first published under the pseudonym of N. W. Clerk it was given me by a friend, and I read it with great interest and considerable distance. I was in the middle of my own marriage, with three young children, and although I felt great sympathy for C. S. Lewis in his grief over the death of his wife, at that time it was so far from my own experience that I was not deeply moved.

In A Grief Observed, Lewis's book about the loss of his wife published posthumously, he doesn't start off with a satisfying answer about where God is in times of struggle. The book is so raw that it was first published under a pseudonym (N.W. Clerk) in 1961 and then accredited formally to Lewis with a reprinting in 1963.

1. A Grief Observed contains C. S. Lewis's intimate notes about grief and feeling abandoned by God, like a door was slammed in his face and bolted shut. "Not that I am (I think) in much danger of ceasing to believe in God," he surmises. "The real danger is of coming to believe such dreadful things about Him" (p. 6).
