I was actually looking for the latest Marantz CD6000 cd player, but no one carried them, finally went to one dealer but had the DR6000 instead and was offered at a price that was a steal. Hooked it up to my Marantz receiver and immediately the sounds were fresher and the voices fuller. This is a great player! Haven't tested the recording yet.

In use, the DR6000 is as straightforward as your average CD-R. There's the usual synch and manual record options, plus a 'make CD' feature that does it all in one hit. It has a useful four second input buffer so that synch recordings don't start just after the first note, and even with analog recordings it's possible to have track numbers automatically inserted, as long as there's a 2.7 second gap between tracks.

An e-mail to Marantz confirmed that the machine was designed for 74 minute discs and cannot reliably use the 80 minute type. (This is NOT mentioned in the owner's manual or any of Marantz's promotional material.) I have had no problems with 74 minute discs; the copies from both CDs and records sound great. The manual is very poor.

I have had the Marantz model DR-700 for a good few months now, but because my primary CD source is a Kenwood 5 disc carousel which does not have digital outputs, this CD recorder is connected via the ANALOG section. After making recordings on it, off both CDs and vinyl records, I have found many faults.
