In the film era, I used Minolta SLR's with MD Rokkor manual focus lenses before buying a Pentax 6X7 with 3 lenses. Now with autofocus equipment (K20, K5, K3, K1 and 645Z), I've grown lazy at manual-focusing. I've started using my 12 Pentax 67 lenses on my 645Z and I find it hard sometimes to achieve critical focus with slow lenses.

It's one of the very first manual focus SLR lenses that I ever bought and I used it together with a 50mm Minolta prime lens and it covered pretty much every need. Today, the Minolta 35-70 fills that role as the 24-70 isn't quite up to the quality of the other two Vivitar lenses. Unfortunately not all Vivitar Series 1 lenses are gems.

Minolta made some of the best stuff in the game in my opinion and even though I had switched to Nikon before they left I was sad to see it happen. The 9xi was the pro version of the 7xi so you may want to look at it if you really wanting to focus on Minolta gear. I never owned this model, but I have no doubts it would be a great deal if bought ...

Which model Minolta did your aunt use? Since you did not specify and you said "25+ years", it could be the case that she had a manual focus camera, in which case none of the lenses will fit on the Sony. All autofocus Minolta lenses should mount and autofocus on the Sony cameras. Other specific compatibility issues, I can't comment on.
