feature of a Scottish Fold is its ears, which are small and folded forward. The tips of the ears are rounded. The coat of the Scottish Fold is short and dense. It comes in a variety of colours and patterns. Folds are said not to be an active breed, and this may be because of pain involved in movement (see below).

Origin. The Scottish Fold breed originated in Scotland with a folded-ear cat named Susie back in the 1960's. Through the breeding of her offspring a genetic mutation occurred, resulting in a dominant gene of folded ears that can be passed on if only one of the parent's carries the gene. There are two varieties of the Scottish
