The Iraqi Christ, by Hassan Blasim - review | The Spectator

The qualities which distinguished the "Madman" are all here again in the opening pages of "The Iraqi Christ": the sly self-referentiality of the frame – a story-telling competition hosted by a Baghdad radio station – the black comedy, the unexpected twists, and the sharp, disturbing images (a man "with no arms and a beard that almost reached his waist... deep in thought, like a decrepit Greek statue.")
