SuperCalc is a CP/M-80 spreadsheet application published by Sorcim in 1980. Visicalc was the first-ever spreadsheet program but was never made available for the popular CP/M operating system. SuperCalc was created to fill that void and market opportunity. It was originally bundled (along with WordStar) as part of the CP/M applications package included with the Osborne 1 portable computer.

A mechanism allows for programming the order of cells for an operator to enter data in a spreadsheet. Each cell of the spreadsheet may be provided with a "next cell" attribute, and these attributes as well as other attributes for the cells are stored in a table. The "next cell" attribute may be a constant, such as the name of the next cell, or it may be a logic expression so that the next cell ...

If you don't have access to a SuperCalc installation anymore, and you really need the file(s) you might look to data conversion services (for a cost) like E-TECH SuperCalc Conversion. That's not an endorsement, I have never used their services. I did also read that Excel 95 may have been able to read SuperCalc files, if you can locate an old copy of that.
