Along the way, we learn much about our protagonist (Miguel Syjuco), his mentor (Salvador) and the tumultuous history of the Philippines. This is not a quick (or easy) read, but the rewards are well worth the investment. Like all great books, Ilustrado asks as many questions as it answers, and it leaves you wanting/needing to reread it immediately.

Ilustrado by Miguel Syjuco | Fiction | The Guardian

Ilustrado is a novel by Miguel Syjuco. I want to end this so I did, congrats to me and to my reading buddies. Its delivery may falter, but the punchline is certainly a doozie, which leads to another certainty: This is some serious crap and waste of time. Non-linear storyline The main story is more or less linear, but timelines and settings jump.
